Food Security Spotlight

The Community Food Centers are a collection of partners across Canada who have made it their mission to reduce food insecurity as part of a three year plan (2024-2027). They accomplish this by hosting workshops and events across the country, where they share knowledge, and create health-focused food programs for those in need. In addition, they build food centers, where healthy, safe meals are available. According to the Community Food Center, approximately 8.7 million Canadians live with some sort of food insecurity, whether that be health or access, which is an all-time high for the country. The Community Food Center plans to drastically reduce this number through the above mentioned establishments along with equity and inclusivity training. A detailed account of their three year food security plan is available on their website, <https://cfccanada.ca/en/Home>.
