Work in Progress

Program Coordinator's Report

CAP Agreement: Cranbrook and District Restorative Justice Society has signed an agreement with the Ministry of Safety and the Office of the Solicitor General (CAP Agreement) to deliver restorative practice in the province of British Columbia. This year, the definition of "appropriate files" was defined by the capacity of the organization to appropriately address the needs of the victims.

Policy Manual: Part of the work this year has been to support the development of Provincial Standards of Practices for Restorative Justice organizations and facilitators. The Standards were completed in the fall of this year and recent work has been to incorporate the same into the CDRJS Policy Manual.

CDRJS Constitution and Bylaws: 2018 marks the year during which the Constitution and Bylaws for our not-for-profit organization need to be amended to address the new changes in the Societies Act for BC.

MOU with Ktunaxa Nation Council (KNC): We successfully reached agreement on a Memorandum of Understanding with KNC. The agreement will provide future direction and support for Aboriginal victims and offenders in this territory.

Training: Two facilitator training sessions were offered by Debbie and Doug McPhee in Cranbrook and District. The sessions were: January 2017 and October of 2017 - work continues providing mentoring for the new facilitators. Our thanks again to COTR for providing the training space.

Strategic Planning: In July of 2017, CDRJS Board Members were engaged in a Strategic Planning Review. Jacquie Dust facilitated the review and the New Board for 2018 will be well-served by this thoughtful process.

Program Coordinator Contract: There was a performance review of the Program Coordinator which resulted in a contract renewal until the end of June 2018.

CDRJS Office Move: Not once, but twice and all for good reasons!

Website Facelift: The CDRJS website has been updated using the Divi theme of WordPress. The new theme allows us greater opportunity to showcase the beauty of this region.

CDRJS Merges with EKOHDE: The mandate of the East Kootenay Organization for Human Dignity and Equality <http://www.ekohde.org/display.php?PID=26> is to provide opportunities which support the understanding and development of human dignity and equality. Restorative Justice is a process which works toward restoring human dignity while addressing the harm of crime. The Humanity Network is a collaborative group of service providers and not-for-profit organizations who were pulled together by EKOHDE to determine the yearly community programs and events. Members from CDRJS have been active in EKOHDE and the Humanity Network. When EKOHDE had difficulty maintaining a management structure, the concept of merging with CDRJS was a welcome invitation. Amy Cross, who was the contractor for EKOHDE, has been hired through them to facilitate the transition and melding of the programs.

OARH Organizing Against Racism and Hate: One of the responsibilities of the CDRJS participation in the Humanity Network was to be a contact for Incident Reporting and Support through the RCMP and the OARH network. Funding has been made available through them to support a community awareness piece that was defined by the Humanity Network. I'm sure that if Amy or Deb are in attendance, they will want to talk more on this exciting development.

I'm sure that there is more that could be said, but please have a look at our website.

Doug McPhee Program Coordinator

Reflection on 2017 – File Referrals

CDRJS offers Restorative Justice alternatives to formal court practices used to address crime. It is not an alternative to formal court process or in competition with formal court processes. Files that are referred to CDRJS from the RCMP and Crown are those in which the:

- a) Offender is taking responsibility for their actions and is willing to address the harm done to others,
- b) Severity of crime is deemed appropriate for a restorative process. Typical referrals for restorative processes are those for which the offender may receive fines and community service if the referral would proceed through court.

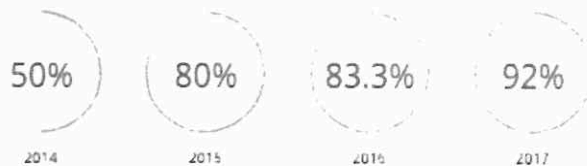

The identity and agreements reached as the result of a restorative justice process are confidential. The following data discussion is based on non-identifying information only.
