Brief History of the Fire Department

Oshawa fire services started on February 4, 1856, as a volunteer department under Chief Engineer Mr. P. Thornton by order of By-law 33. The first piece of firefighting equipment was an old one-handed operated pumper cart. On July 20, 1868, the Oshawa Fire Department was incorporated as a full-time department by By-law 142. The first full time Chief was Patrick Thornton. He was responsible for 50 men with the Fire Company and a further 15 men with the Hook and Ladder Company, plus one engine, some ladders and numerous hose lines.

Before the waterworks system of hydrants, water for fighting fires was supplied from domestic wells or underground tanks. The largest storage tank was built of concrete and was located beneath the Town Hall at the southwest corner of Richmond and Simcoe Streets (the Town Hall also served as the Fire Station and Police Station). Other tanks were built of cedar logs and were placed at several suitable locations in the downtown area. The tanks were usually filled by rain water from roofs and ditches, but if necessary, water had to be hauled in to maintain a suitable level.

On January 1, 1926, Chief Angus Cameron received the first four permanent full-time firefighters. By 1970, the total staff complement was 159. It was under Chief Stacey's term in 1970 that the Oshawa Fire Department appointed its first Training Officer, Wm. Tweedie. 1973 saw the end of an era in the Fire Service when the Oshawa Civic Ambulance Service, operated by the Department since 1953, was transferred to the Province. By 1981, all four existing fire halls were relocated to their present locations to facilitate faster response times and more effective coverage. In 1982 under Chief Forsythe, Oshawa became the first fire department in Canada to implement a computer aided dispatch system to improve vehicle response.
